running. I've searched SO extensively for a solution to this but found the best answer I could come up with to be a custom made timer, something I don't seem to be able to use with my Windows Service. I'm looking for a suggestion to make a timeout event that runs a method in the service on Timeout. The tricky part is that I'm looking for something like a thread.sleep within my Windows Service in the event handler to avoid causing a hang for those in the future that use this code. Here's the event handler that I have that executes a method within my Windows Service. I'm using the static Run() function to spawn off the thread, and I'm not sure how to use it effectively.

private static void OnStart(object sender, EventArgs e) { // Application Start for the service if (!tService.IsStarted) { tService.ServiceName = "My Service Name"; tService.CanStop = false; tService.CanPause = false; tService.CanContinue = true; tService.Description = "My Description"; tService.ServiceName = "My tService.CanContinue = true; tService.Description = "My Description";
