The programs are part of broader push to switch from conventional buses to electric powered vehicles as part of broader climate change agenda. They are aimed not only at reducing smog and CO2 emissions, but also offering a more futuristic look. Panasonic, for instance, is investing $63 million in the Tokyo-based company's first electric bus, which will begin operation this summer on the city's No. 6 line. To date, all of Panasonic's buses have been diesel-powered. But that will change after this summer, as the company shifts to electric-only powerplants and battery-powered buses. What's new in Gibbous - A Cthulhu Adventure Artbook:

, the leading provider of automated manufacturing solutions, is pleased to announce that it has been selected by the state-owned agency in Qatar for the next round of automation projects. Qatar MAE, which is the main agency responsible for constructing, renovating and upgrading the state's infrastructure, has been collaborating with a number of international partners, including Ziircon, in each of the seven regions of Qatar. Thanks to these partnerships, Qatar MAE is able to select and implement strategic projects such as automation solutions that are the most suitable, based on a matrix developed for each location. As announced by the agency's deputy secretary general, Khalid Al-Attiah, in February, this collaborative process is the agency's "strategic direction" in each region. At the end of February, the agency signed agreements with the seventh partner. Their projects are located in Al Khor South, Al Daayen, Al Wakra and Al Mafraq. Each of these areas is home to a national industrial zone. The purpose of the project that is to be signed is to upgrade the process of the industrial zones, including laying the groundwork for the introduction of large-scale automation installations, such as robots. "Our longtime partnership with QMI and our region stand out given our 100+ year heritage in the market", says Ralf Krebs, CEO of Ziircon. "Ziircon plays an integral role in Qatari automation, and we are honored to continue our work here." Qatar's economic statistics can be taken as evidence of the gulf nation's economic stability. Last year, the country implemented a tax reform in 2010 that avoided the country's near default (when the deficit in government spending amounted to 12% of total income). This shows how, when the economy is working well, you can invest money to make things work even better. In fact, this was evident in the experience of some of the largest investment companies in the world. The fiscal crisis that started in 2010 forced the Group's member companies to reduce capital expenditures. During the first half of 2011, the German companies shut down almost 3,000 projects with a value of CHF 284 billion. For the first quarter of 2011, instead, they had to postpone about 3,500 projects with a value of CHF 110 billion. The outlook is not encouraging. However, as shareholders, it is important to look into
