This is how it works, when you use your mouse to click on a dll in the directory, it will go to the directory it was decompiled from. You can right click on the dll and click "Open with" or you can drag it to your MRS Decompiler and it'll decompile it. Note: MRS decompiler can decompile mrs files, but it cant compile files at this time. Decompiling mrs files is a entirely different process than decompiling files. It will not compile code. This is required because I am using the DateDiff function on those values How can I do that in VBA? Thanks in advance! P.S. If it is important to know that that filter is only applied on the data in A19 and I need to change the type from text to date on the whole range A: Application.XlCalculate Range("A19:A1000").SpecialCells(xlCellTypeVisible).NumberFormat = "m/d/yyyy" Application.XlCalculate Q: How to combine the type of an argument list and a list of values in Haskell? I'm not sure I have the right terminology for what I want to do, so I'm not 100% sure what would go in the title. Anyway, here's what I want to do. I have two functions that do something similar, and I want to write a generic function that takes them as arguments. In the example below I'm trying to write a function that takes a list of int's as an argument, and a list of some other type that are all of the same length as the input
