NoReload Heroes is a chaotic co-op party shooter for up to four people. You play as a team, fighting your way through randomly generated rooms filled with various types of enemies, picking up insane magitech guns on the way. Shooting stuff up is simple and hilarious, but only the best of teams can make it all the way back to the evil they created. NoReload Heroes is designed for 4-player co-op, but we have high hopes that you'll be able to play online via game chat. If you ever need more controllers or spectators, you can always ask a friend to join your game. NoReload Heroes is a party shooter with funny characters, crazy action and lots of items to play with. There are no items to win, no points to score. Just a lot of fun. 2 Players / Co-op Play Features: - Arcade - Friendly co-op play - Minigames - Minigames on the map! - Timed boss battles - Random levels - 70+ unique magitech weapons - Players can respawn twice at the bottom floor - Designed for social situations, like parties and game nights NoReload Heroes is one of those games that make you wish you never had a wife. (At least in the morning) Heres the scenario: you've all gone to save the world, only to find out your wife is pregnant, making her enemies well, evil. So you have to save her, but have to play NoReload Heroes to do it! 3 players Co-op RPG game! The games story is pretty linear, where you play as Jessica with the help of friends in order to save the world, because you're pregnant and need their help to kill the queen of evil! You begin by watching a flash backed video where the good guys make a fool of the bad guys You then get to choose who you want to be your main team member! Your character selection is pretty limited, unlike your character's personality. You only get to choose the starting class for your character, so other classes can be unlocked later on (The rest is unlockable via the game). A lot of the classes are pretty pointless, they come off as more of an after thought but it would be nice if some of them were in the game or have an actual purpose to them. The game plays like a RPG. Once you hit the map screen c9d1549cdd

Mothers Present On Oral Cancer Screening By ROBERT GRAY MIDLAND — Every morning Alicia Qaadri takes time out of her day of housekeeping and caregiving to head to the Knoell Cancer Care Center in Mineola with her son, Ismail, to get a once-a-year childhood cancer screening. Qaadri, 55, from Norwalk, is in the midst of a moving across the nation from her Virginia home to attend Eastern Connecticut State University in Storrs while her son goes to high school in Texas. “Every day is like a challenge,” Qaadri said. “[With] cancer in the family, you don’t know what’s going to happen.” Though the experience with her son’s cancer screening was negative, she emphasized that her son is the only child she knows who gets cancer. “Why is [cancer] so high among children? You could easily get that if you are an adult. It’s like [the question is], ‘Why do adults get a lower rate?’” Qaadri said. “Why isn’t the same thing for children?” When Qaadri was pregnant with her son in 2002, she sought out screening tests that dealt with fetal abnormalities. Her preventive care team at the time recommended no screens until the child came to term. No problem. Qaadri and her son both are married with children, and her son has yet to have any screenings. “I was educated to prevent cancer,” Qaadri recalled. “He has a higher rate of predisposing factors that we don’t know what it could be,” said Dr. Mark Kouwenhoven, medical director of pediatric hematology and oncology at the Knoell Cancer Center. “We don’t really know, but we need to get to the bottom of it and play around with clues that might explain why.” This year (2014), the American Academy of Pediatrics® just made childhood cancer screening mandatory for 4-year-olds, Kouwenhoven said. “We [need to] significantly and substantially increase the number of tests,” he said. “If you ask different groups on the road the reason for this, their
