A group of students who cut up footballs at a Tennessee high school game before students with a head injury collapsed on the field in an apparent suicide attempt are students from the school. CBS News in Nashville reports the teens were members of the school's track team and high school football team. School officials say the students cut up the balls at Friday night's game in memory of a teammate and friend who committed suicide. Get Breaking News Delivered to Your Inbox The parents of the students say they didn't know about the act and didn't approve. Twenty-one-year-old Jared Darnell Forrester committed suicide in 2015. He'd been injured playing football, and his family says he needed long-term medical care. School officials say the students who committed the prank were suspended, but the football players who collapsed in the game were transported to the hospital. The present invention relates to apparatus for printing in a continuous chain of spaced print positions on a web of material. In prior patent applications assigned to the assignee hereof, there has been shown apparatus for printing on flexible papers and tapes. Such apparatus, as exemplified in U.S. Pat. Nos. 3,948,734, 3,744,851, 3,718,012, 3,676,558 and 3,491,248, includes a rotary cylinder having a cam surface which cam surface is rotated by a drive shaft connected to a source of power. A print head carries an elongate print carrier which includes a plurality of print elements, such as type or ink jets, which print serially on a web of material as the web is advanced past the print head. As the web passes between the drive shaft and the print head, the print elements are sequentially actuated to provide a series of spaced print positions on the web. In these systems the print element is spaced from the surface of the print carrier on the print head by an amount sufficient to accommodate the tolerances of the diameter of the print head and the diameter of the print carrier. Also the spacing between the print head and the print carrier varies from one to a next print position which creates problems in maintaining a uniform
