Joana -----Original Message----- From: Dahlke, Andrea Sent: Thursday, December 13, 2001 1:35 PM To: O'Neil, Murray P.; Geaccone, Tracy; Scribner, James; Shively, Hunter S.; Luce, Laura; Presto, Kevin M.; Duran, W. David; Cordes, Bill; Carroll, Lillian Subject: Refining capital plan for 2002 On Wednesday, December 12, 2001, the meeting was held with a representative from the refining and marketing company to discuss the refining project and capital plan for 2002. The meeting was attended by Steve Kean, Enron's chairman and CEO; Tom White, president of the refining and marketing company; C.E. Shively, Enron's general manager of refining and marketing; Roger Ondreko, vice president and manager, refining and marketing; and myself, Andrea Dahlke, senior director, refining and marketing. All parties agreed to the need for Enron to become a participant in the refining project and the need for more capital to be put into refining. Enron's entry into this business will be profitable for Enron and beneficial to the refining and marketing company, which has begun to do business with Enron. The refining company is looking at locations in the Northeast, Southeast, and Midwest. Enron will use the gas and power from the new refinery to supply the new power plants that have been proposed in these areas. Enron will also act as a supply and marketing entity for this gas and power. Enron's subsidiary will buy and sell the gas and power, and hold the economic interest. The only exception to this will be where there are existing pipelines. Roger Ondreko estimated that a project like this could cost anywhere from $5 to $10 million. Enron has the ability to finance the project, and with our debt being as low as it is, we can probably extend another term to Enron. Because Enron will not be making a profit on this business, the risk is ca3bfb1094

Press "OK" Screenshot defendant within that period of time, and any conduct on the part of defendant which occurred after the plaintiff received notice of the claim...." This, however, does not indicate whether defendant knew about plaintiff's claim when it made the loans. Moreover, this sentence does not reference the last sentence of subsection (b), which we are discussing in this section. As such, we cannot say that this section contains the unambiguous statement required to preserve the ambiguity contained in subsection (b). See Cumberland, 932 P.2d at 1362. -8- #27783 IV. [¶19.] In sum, we conclude that the circuit court erred in dismissing defendant's action against plaintiff based on SDCL 23A-22-1(b). However, we also hold that the plain language of SDCL 23A-22-1(b) does not unambiguously indicate that subsection (b) overrides subsection (a) with respect to a claim for conversion by failing to return a loan. As such, we affirm in part, reverse in part, and remand for further proceedings. [¶20.] Affirmed in part, reversed in part, and remanded. What's New In AutoCAD?

We now offer the ability to synchronize objects and annotations created in a previous version with your current project. This can help you avoid re-creating your drawings when you reopen them and avoid losing time redrawing the same content from scratch. This comes in the form of a new Tools option in the Visualize menu: Sync to Previous Version. In addition, you can now mark up your drawings by importing PDF annotations directly into your drawings. Annotation importing uses a new annotation format that is native to AutoCAD and includes a natural size for the text. (video: 3:10 min.) Paths that are shared across multiple drawings are now saved when you update drawings. (video: 1:46 min.) Dwg Update (Necessary): DataStories: DataStories enable you to view and edit dataset files in AutoCAD, allowing you to explore data sources available to your project. (video: 1:10 min.) Plot Styles: Plot Styles allow you to quickly apply pre-defined styles to sets of data in your drawings. Plot Styles can even be used to create 2D charts with AutoCAD. (video: 1:16 min.) Virtual Dimensions (Necessary): If you're working with multi-sheet documents, your drawings will be constrained to the size of the visible region in the drawing area. To view the full size of the drawing, use the Virtual Dimensions tool on the View tab. (video: 1:01 min.) When you create drawings with a new feature, it will appear in a New Feature menu in the top-right corner of the drawing area. You can select the feature by double-clicking on the menu item. (video: 1:16 min.) Template Hierarchy (Necessary): The Template Hierarchy enables you to group objects and elements that are based on a common trait. This allows you to group objects based on their relationship to each other, rather than on a common trait. (video: 1:10 min.) 3D Constraints: When you create complex drawings, it can be hard to ensure that all objects fit together in the drawing area and on the screen. Adding 3D constraints can help reduce the need for manual adjustments. Add 3D constraints to your drawings by using the New 3D Con
