Star-Crossed (2015 film) Star-Crossed is a 2015 American-Canadian teen romantic drama film directed by Glenn Leyburn and written by Jamie Laber, based on the novel Fade: A Star-Crossed Novel by Robert J. Sawyer. Starring Danielle Panabaker and Sophie Lowe, the film was released on August 28, 2015 by Lionsgate Films. Plot Gus (Van Dyke), a neuropsychiatrist, lost his wife, Lucy (Wai), to a brain aneurysm. He is a widower who lives alone with his daughter, Julie, who is also his patient. He is also attracted to his new patient, Sam (Lowe). Sam is a young violinist who is being treated for depression, brought on by a series of bad break-ups. Gus' job stresses him out, so he takes a sabbatical to go to Italy, only to find that Lucy is still alive and leading a secluded life there. He doesn't learn about this until later; Lucy has simply preferred to keep that secret from him. He becomes angry at her for not telling him. Lucy, however, feels that Gus doesn't understand her, and that she is not ready to leave him. She knows that it is within Gus' power to help her on her path to recovery, but she feels she must be in a better place emotionally for him to do so, and to their marriage to continue. So instead of confronting Gus with her existence, she decides to simply remain hidden from him. Meanwhile, she falls in love with Sam. While Lucy is away, Gus becomes increasingly concerned about her. He frets over her safety when she is out, and he has a tracker installed to help him find her. He becomes increasingly jealous of Sam, and also discovers that his wife had a stepbrother named Billy (Gibson). After she returns to the U.S., Julie becomes involved with Sam. Sam's mother, Lucy (Panabaker), does not approve of Julie, although she hasn't gone out of her way to reject her. She prefers to devote herself to Sam, who is less than pleased about that. They begin an affair which Gus eventually finds out about. Sam visits with Julie, who plays the viola for her. He tells her to stop. Julie and Sam become closer, and Julie offers to help him with his music. Gus demands that they stop seeing each other

REUTERS/Stringer BEIJING (Reuters) - China's food consumption growth slowed to a nearly five-year low in the last quarter of 2012, pointing to a potential let down in the annual growth rate of the world's second-largest economy, an official said on Tuesday. The State Statistical Bureau (SSB) also said fixed-asset investment growth slowed to a near-five-year low, though it has been growing since mid-2009 as the authorities prop up property development and other heavy industry with massive credit in the face of slowing demand for consumer products. Its latest reading of quarterly food consumption, which measures the amount of food bought by households, was slightly better than expected, at an annual growth rate of 8.3 percent, slowing from 8.5 percent in the previous three months and 8.7 percent in the final quarter of last year, the SSB said in a statement. Its adjusted, seasonally-adjusted growth rate for food consumption was 6.8 percent, the slowest since 3.8 percent in the final quarter of 2008, reflecting moderation in food prices and shortages of nutritious food, the SSB added. China's economy grew at a near-decade low of 8.3 percent in the third quarter, according to figures released by the Commerce Ministry on Friday. The National Bureau of Statistics will release its third-quarter GDP growth estimate this week, with a forecast of 7.9 percent. SSB data shows that China's per capita disposable income and urban household income at year-end 2012 were 2.3 and 3.2 percent lower than in the same period of 2011, respectively. Fixed-asset investment growth slowed to a 5.5-year low of 17.9 percent in the third quarter, from 19.1 percent in the previous three months and 19.9 percent in the third quarter of 2012. Fixed-asset investment at the end of 2012 was up 22.2 percent from a year earlier. China's economic growth rate dipped for the first time in three years in the third quarter as weak domestic demand and factory overcapacity forced the government to roll out measures to arrest the slowdown. The European Union also released data on Tuesday showing that although its gross domestic product growth hit a 10-year high of 0.6 percent in
