A gallium nitride (GaN) based compound semiconductor is an insulator having a wide forbidden band gap of three eV. A gallium nitride based compound semiconductor has many advantages. For example, it has a large direct-transition band gap, and has a large forbidden band gap, and is applied to a light-emitting diode, a field effect transistor, a high-temperature electronic device, and so on. A current generally uses a metal oxide such as indium tin oxide (ITO) and indium zinc oxide (IZO) as a transparent conductive film for electrodes or various functional layers in electronic devices and light-emitting devices. As described in Patent Literature 1, an indium oxide (In2O3) based transparent conductive film can be obtained by heating an indium oxide film to a temperature of about 400
