Q: GAMS: Varying the density for events with different values I'm running some experiments. I need to vary the density of the occurring events of specific kind. Let's say I have 2 experiments. The parameter for each of them is called ValueX and ValueY respectively. I need to call ValueX once for experiments 1, 2 and 3 (parameters x1, x2 and x3 respectively). Similarly I would like to call the ValueY parameter once for experiments 1, 2 and 3 (parameters y1, y2 and y3 respectively). Each of them should have 100 different values. Is there a way to do this in GAMS? A: Use experiment("x1"); experiment("x2"); experiment("x3"); experiment(ValueX, ValueY, 100); You can also extend an existing experiment with experiment("x1", ValueX, 100); experiment("x2", ValueX, 100); experiment("x3", ValueX, 100); Parallel ion-molecule direct electrospray process for high-throughput screening of cation binding to proteins. The most important problem for the development of high throughput screening (HTS) methods is the selection of a suitable experimental design. This paper describes a new HTS method based on the combination of a direct electrospray mass spectrometry (ES-MS) with ion-molecule reaction mass spectrometry (IM-MS) in an off-line fashion. The data analysis of the experimental data was carried out using a self-developed Graphical Laboratory Application (GLA) software. Standard proteins, human serum albumin (HSA), lysozyme and RNase A, were used to examine the proposed approach. The results showed a significant difference in the ion binding rate constants for all proteins studied. The obtained binding rate constant for HSA was found to be 2.2 +/- 0.2 times faster than that observed with lysozyme, and 1.2 +/- 0.1 times faster than that found for RNase A. Thus, the new methodology is reliable and may be used to investigate ion
