 Human cerebral slices for determination of minimal alveolar concentration. A study was conducted to determine the usefulness of human cerebral slices for studying the pharmacokinetics of an inhaled anesthetic. A 2 mg/ml solution of thiopental, a potent anesthetic, was aerosolized in 0.9% NaCl and administered at a flow rate of 2 l/min to six adult patients, each of whom was placed in a supine position on the operating table of the dorsolumbar spine. The patients' right-sided brains were removed en bloc and cut coronally into 100-micron-thick sections. The right-side brain sections were incubated in thiopental and then tracheally aspirated and analyzed by gas chromatography. The tracheal aspirate obtained from the same patients during surgical anesthesia was also analyzed. The results obtained for thiopental in tracheal aspirate from the patients were comparable to those obtained from the right-side brain sections. The study showed that tissue slices obtained from the human brain are suitable for inhalational anesthetic testing.
 A quick look at select player ratings trends through Week 5 of the college football season reveals many promising and, at times, disconcerting trends that have the potential to shape the balance of power on the gridiron for the remainder of the 2012 season. Predictably, as is usually the case, the top 10 performers through Week 5 have remained relatively consistent. The Pittsburgh Steelers' Big Ben Roethlisberger, Alabama Crimson Tide's AJ McCarron and LSU Tigers' Tyrann Mathieu continue to pace the top three on the season, and the other four prospects in the top 10 are Syracuse Orange quarterback Ryan Nassib, Florida Gators' Tim Tebow, Arkansas Razorbacks' Johnathon Jones and Oregon Ducks' LaMichael James. Tight end play and production are also on an upswing. Seven of the top 10 highest-graded players in the country in Week 5 are tight ends. The Hokies' Jordan Reed joins the list of top-graded tight ends, and Texas A&M's Dax Swanson, Notre Dame's Kyle Rudolph, Auburn's C.J. Uzomah and USC's Dennis Pitta all improve their ratings in Week 6. Overall, tight end play in 2012 has been very good. For that, you have to give credit to the offenses around the country.
