While Fiqh (Arabic: فِیْه, al-fiqh) is the sole scholarly discipline within Islam that deals with the precepts of all aspects of Muslim life, it also is the best established formal discipline in Islam. The Five Schools of Law in Islam are Fiqh, Kalam (dialectic),

Hadith (tradition), Salaf (pious predecessors) and Sufism. "Faqih" is a transliteration of the Arabic word for "jurisprudence" which is "Fiqh al-Mufti", a legal or hudud fatwa (Islamic legal opinion). Fiqh studies the general principles and rules of Islamic law, and has numerous branches, including tafsir, ulama tafsir, hikmat (fornication), mukadasa, zuhd, shariah and fiqh. It determines the religious rules and regulations that govern human behavior in general and that of Muslims in particular. Fiqh is the Islamic law as set forth by the Quran, Sunnah and fiqh science.

Fiqh is one of the six authentic branches of Islamic law. Fiqh is the science of the distinguishing and declaring of the divine qualities and attributes of God. Fiqh is the primary basis for the entire scope of Islamic law. Fiqh has been divided into twenty five disciplines, or fiqh al-
