directors timeline allows you to create a score with multiple timing tracks, each with its own start and stop frame and each playing a different sound or animation. you can even nest timelines within timelines and assign a different appearance to each one. you can arrange cast members on the timeline in any layout. when you play the animation, director uses the current playing frames to generate the corresponding frames for the cast members. if youre using video, you can easily switch between different versions of the same video and instantly see the results. in version 8.5, director adds new sound effects (fxs) and add-ons, including one that lets you create a 3d virtual reality environment. directors interface is a snap to navigate thanks to new tabs that make it easy to access common features. each tab includes a thumbnail of the project so you can easily flip through the set of tabs to find the one youre looking for. each tab also has a quick access menu that lets you create a shortcut to the application. macromedia director is not an animation program. theres no way to edit animation directly. you must first design the characters in a 2d tool and then import them into director, where they will be animated, as either bitmaps or flash movies. director ships with support for a wide range of popular file formats, including bitmaps, text, vector graphics, flash movies, flash animations, audio files, and video files. you can import bitmap images and drawings into director as bitmaps or thumbnails, and they can include multiple channels (such as red, green, and blue). you can edit the positions, colors, and other properties of these objects. you can also animate them using any of the built-in animation behaviors or customize them with the scripting language lingo.
