In Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom, Nintendo distributed physical clippings. Through February 3, 2016, the clippings could be redeemed online to obtain a chance to obtain the Elite Four, which are essentially six Pokemon that can't be obtained from the AR Games. A progress tracker was displayed to show players how many clippings they have as well as the total number available. The players could also vote in the poll of which of the elite six Pokemon they'd like the most. On February 3, 2016, Nintendo added the top votes from the poll to the list of Pokemon that could be obtained. Those six Pokemon were then given out to players based on the number of clippings they had. Those clippings were distributed through parcel delivery and could be redeemed by March 15, 2016. In Belgium and the Netherlands, Nintendo distributed physical clippings to specific regions. They were given away in a similar fashion to the ones in Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom. The clippings could be redeemed through a voucher that could be redeemed from December 16, 2015 to April 15, 2016. In Japan, the Pokemon Company began distributing physical clippings at various locations including game stores, grocery stores and Niconico fanclub stores from October 5 to 7, 2015. The clippings could be redeemed at the following Pokemon Home sites:
