2001-2018 joel de guzman, hartman nicolaes feel guilty, i do. as i see it, it's unfair to demand that people check their privilege and then turn around and say "you should feel guilty for having privileges because we don't like them." that's a bit like the hypocrites in the catholic church (and the jesuit order in particular, which you're part of) who enjoy having privileges in their exclusive religious orders and then wonder why they don't like those privileges. maybe they don't like those privileges. maybe they are putting themselves in a position of advantage relative to those who don't, perhaps including some of the poor, who can't afford to join those religious orders. i don't really understand their thinking. but i do know that i was privileged growing up, and therefore i am privileged in my life today. i hope that i can share that privilege with others, even with people i might be less-fortunate than. "privilege" is a loose term that covers various aspects of social and economic advantage, and as such it is, like the term "privacy," harder to define than to observe.
