Naviextras Toolbox 3.18.5.C-reactive protein response to mental stress in a wide range of coronary-risk patients. The Beta-Association Project. C-reactive protein (CRP) response to mental stress was investigated in 32 women and 43 men, ages 34 to 76 years (mean, 50 years) who were undergoing the cardiovascular exam in a health screening program. Subjects were assessed for the presence and degree of coronary heart disease risk factors and were examined for their plasma levels of CRP and alpha 1-antitrypsin. Groups were matched for cardiovascular disease risk factors and age. Patients were enrolled in a double-blind, placebo-controlled study in which mental stress was induced by a standardized speech. Data were analyzed for the entire group and for age-matched subgroups. Blood samples were obtained before the baseline and on the average 04aeff104c
